STREET IN WASHINGTON.

Attorney Gen'l. How are you this morning, Judge?

Judge I not at all well. I can neither sleep nor eat, and the truth is I am growing so nervous, tired, and weak, that I cannot discharge my duties to my satisfaction.

Attorney Gen'l. You must take Hood's Sarsaparilla; it is an excellent medicine for dyspepsia

Judge. Hood's Sarsaparilla? My wife has been trying to persuade me to buy a bottle for you lately. Is it the article?

Attorney Gen'l. Yes, and I cannot say enough in its praise. I had this same worn out dyspeptic trouble last spring, and my wife insisted on my taking "Hood's Sarsaparilla," which entirely cured him the previous year. It cured me, and now you must try it. Remember, Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Judge. I will go and get a bottle now. "Hood's Sarsaparilla" is the kind I want! I will make a note of it, so as to make no mistake.

INTERIOR OF DRUG STORE.

Judge. Have you Hood's Sarsaparilla?

Apothecary. Yes, sir; and sell more of it than of any similar medicine

Judge. Do you know the firm who make it?

Apothecary Yes They are men of undoubted integrity, and are among the best pharmacists in Massachusetts. The senior member served a five years' apprenticeship under one of the most careful druggists Massachusetts ever had. Samuel Hodder. He then spent over four years with the largest and best retail house in New England, Theodore Metcalf & Co., Boston (proprietors of Melinda Food), since which time he has done a successful apothecary business in Lowell

Judge. I am pleased to know this, as I feared it might be made by some venturesome person, who had no knowledge of medicines. The next appearance of the article impresses me favorably. I will try a bottle

TEN DAYS LATER.

Judge Well, Mr. Attorney, your prescription is working well. I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla ten days. It is a pleasant surprise to find I can eat and not suffer, and can go to bed and sleep. It is actually making me young and full again

Attorney General It is doing for you just what it did for me. The next friend on meet who is suffering from these infirmities so common to rich and poor, insist upon his trying a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and you will experience the same pleasure in meeting him which I now feel!

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures dyspepsia, biliousness, spring debility, indigestion, creates an appetite, makes the weak strong, eradicates scrofula and salt rheum, and works upon the kidneys, the liver, and the bowels through the blood

Sold by druggists. Price, one dollar, six for five dollars. Made by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

SPRING VEDICINE

The reason why there is such a universal need of everybody's taking some medicine in the spring is, that being "housed up" through the winter, the vitality of the blood becomes so reduced, by breathing the impurities in the atmosphere of rooms heated by wood or coal and contaminated by the gases they throw off, that it is impossible to withstand the debilitating influence of spring weather. The vitalizing effects of Hood's Sarsaparilla upon the entire system render it the most effective spring medicine.

"When I had finished the second bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla I felt like a new person. I tell my friends I can do two days' work in one now." Mrs. A. D. Allen, Lowell, Mass.

The lassitude, languor, and debility peculiar to warm weather are wholly overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Don't wait till your system is reduced by hot weather, but get Hood's Sarsaparilla immediately. It sharpens the appetite, tones the system, purifies, vitalizes, and enriches the blood, strengthens the digestive organs, invigorates the aged, and imparts new life to all who take it.

"My wife has been suffering with debility, appetite poor, extremely tired on waking up in the morning, and she felt all wrong generally. After she had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla a few days her appetite improved. That feeling of extreme weariness in the morning has entirely disappeared." Geo. F. Hand, School St. Lowell, Mass.

EDUCATING THE FREEDMEN.

THE CHARITABLE PURPOSE OF JOHN F. SLATER.

A GIFT OF $1,000 000 FOR IMPROVING THE CONDITION AND MAKING GOOD CITIZENS OF THE FORMER SLAVES.

NORWICH, Conn., April 12 To-day the first open announcement was made of a magnificent public bequest by a gentleman of this city, which has been in contemplation for several years, and for the utilization of which much quiet counsel and organization has been privately going on for several months. It is now permitted to say that Mr. John F. Slater, a wealthy cotton manufacturer, and one of a family to an exceptional degree identified with the history of that industry in the United States, has decided to give $1,000,000 to be used in the manner and for the purpose set forth in the following letter:

To Messrs. Rutherford B Hayes, of Ohio; Morrison R Waite, of the District of Columbia; William E Dodge, of New York; Phillips Brooks, of Massachusetts, Daniel C Gilman, of Maryland; John A Stewart, of New York, Alfred H. Colquitt, of Georgia; Morris K. Jesup, of New York; James P. Boyce, of Kentucky, and William A. Slater, of Connecticut:

GENTLEMEN: Whereas it has pleased God to grant me prosperity in my business and to put it into my power to apply to charitable uses a sum of money so considerable as to require the counsel of wise men for the administration of it, it is my desire at this time to appropriate to such uses the sum of $1,000,000, and I hereby invite you to procure a charter of incorporation under which a charitable fund may be forever held exempt from taxation, and under which you shall organize; and I intend that the corporation, as soon as formed, shall receive this sum in trust, to apply the income of it according to the instructions contained in this letter.

The general object which I desire to have exclusively pursued is the uplifting of the lately emancipated population of the Southern States and their posterity by conferring on them the blessings of Christian education. The disabilities formerly suffered by these people and their singular patience and fidelity in the great crisis of the Nation, entitle a just claim to the sympathy and good-will of humane and patriotic men. I cannot but feel the compassion that is due in view of their prevailing ignorance, which exists by no fault of their own. But it is not only for their own sake, but also for the safety of our common country, in which they have been invested with equal political rights, that I am desirous to aid in providing them with the means of such education as shall end to make them good men and good citizens—education in which the instruction of the mind in the common branches of secular learning shall be associated with training in just notions of duty toward God and man in the light of the Holy Scriptures. The means to be used in the prosecution of the general object above described I leave to the discretion of the corporation, only indicating as lines of operation adapted to the present condition of things, the training of teachers from among the people requiring to be taught, if, in the opinion of the corporation, by such limited selection the purposes of the trust can be best accomplished, and the encouragement of such institutions as are most effectually useful in promoting this training of teachers. I am well aware that the work hereby proposed is nothing new or untried. And it is no small part of my satisfaction in taking this share in it that I hereby associate myself with some of the noblest enterprises of charity and humanity, and may hope to encourage the prayers and toils of faithful men and women who have labored and are still laboring in this cause.

I wish the corporation which you are invited to constitute to consist at no time of more than 13 members nor of less than 9 for a longer time than may be required for the convenient filling of vacancies, which I desire to be filled by the corporation, and, when found practicable, at its next meeting after the vacancy may occur. I designate as the first President of the corporation the Hon. Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio. I desire that it may have power to provide from the income of the fund, among other things, for expenses incurred by members in the fulfillment of this trust, and for the expenses of such officers and agents as it may appoint, and generally to do all such acts as may be necessary for carrying out the purposes of this trust. I desire, if it may be, that the corporation may have full liberty to invest its funds according to its own best discretion, without reference to or restriction by any laws or rules, legal or equitable, of any nature, regulating the mode of investment of trust funds; only I wish that neither principal nor income be expended in land or buildings for any other purpose than that of safe and profitable investment for income, and I hereby discharge the corporation and its individual members, so far as it is in my power to do so, of all responsibility, except for the faithful administration of this trust, according to their own honest understanding and best judgment. In particular, also, I wish to relieve them of any pretended claim on the part of any person, party, sect, institution, or locality to benefactions from this fund that may be put forward on any ground whatever, as I wish every expenditure to be determined solely by the convictions of the corporation itself as to the most useful disposition of its gifts. I desire that the doings of the corporation each year be printed and sent to each of the State libraries in the United States and to the library of Congress. In case the capital of the fund should become impaired, I desire that a part of the income, not greater than one-half, be invested from year to year until the capital be restored to its original amount. I purposely leave to the corporation the largest liberty of making changes in the methods of applying the income of the fund as shall seem from time to time best adapted to accomplish the general object herein defined. But, being warned by the history of such endowments that they sometimes tend to discourage rather than promote effort and self-reliance on the part of the beneficiaries, or to inure to the advancement of learning instead of the dissemination of it, or to become a convenience to the rich instead of a help to those who need help, I solemnly charge my Trustees to use their best wisdom in preventing any such defeat of the spirit of this trust, so that my gift may continue to future generations to be a blessing to the poor. If at any time after the lapse of 33 years from the date of this foundation it shall appear to the judgment of three-fourths of the members of this corporation that, by reason of a change in social conditions, or by reason of adequate and equitable public provision for education, or by any other sufficient reason, there is no further serious need of this fund in the form in which it is at first instituted, I authorize the corporation to apply the capital of the fund to the establishment of foundations subsidiary to their already existing institutions of higher education in such wise as to make the educational advantages of such institutions more freely accessible to poor students of the colored race. I is my wish that this trust be administered in no partisan, sectional, or sectarian spirit, but in the interest of a generous patriotism and an enlightened Christian faith, and that the corporation about to be formed may continue to be constituted by men distinguished either by honorable success in business or by services to literature, education, religion, or the State.

I am encouraged to the execution in this charitable foundation of a long cherished purpose by the eminent wisdom and success that has marked the conduct of the Peabody educational fund in a field of operations not remote from that contemplated by this trust. I shall commit it to your hands, deeply conscious how insufficient is our best forecast to provide for the future that is known only to God, but humbly hoping that the administration of it may be so guided by divine wisdom as to be in its turn an encouragement to philanthropic enterprise on the part of others and an enduring means of good to our beloved country and to our fellow men.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen, your friend and fellow-citizen.

JOHN F. SLATER.

Norwich, Conn., March 2, 1882.

The gentlemen to whom the letter was addressed made it the preamble of a petition, which was introduced into the New York Legislature a few weeks ago, for an act incorporating "The Trustees of the John F. Slater Fund." The original scheme contained one or two features which were considered objectionable by a few of those to whom it was submitted, namely, an exemption of all property held by the Trustees from taxation, and a clause making this exemption irrepealable, neither of which were altogether satisfactory to the donor. It having been ascertained that on these grounds the measure was likely to meet with the disapproval of Gov. Cornell, they were eliminated last week, with the consent of Mr. Slater, to obviate all objections and embarrassing delay. To-day a bill "To incorporate the Trustees of the John F. Slater Fund" was introduced in the assembly by Mr. A. M. Patterson, of Seneca County. The act is brief, except for the letter of Mr. Slater which introduces it, and provides that all property held by the Trustees, in execution of their trust, except real estate, shall be exempt from taxation; that the Trustees are to be governed by the suggestions contained in the letter; that Mr. Hayes shall be the first President of the board, and that the act shall take effect immediately.

It may be said that this benefaction is not the result of any sudden impulse, having been contemplated by Mr. Slater, in a general way, ever since the war, but more seriously for three years past. This fact, and his finally carrying the purpose into effect, alone show his earnest solicitude for the black man and for the future of the Republic. But this is more vividly revealed, perhaps, by his conversation. During two evenings which the Times' correspondent spent with him, he evinced a quiet but immovable determination to withold any information that was personal to himself and a hearty aversion to being talked about in the newspapers. But, in discussing the numerous topics kindred to his gift—the social condition, instincts, and future of the freedmen, the shrewd and cruel extortions to which they were subjected in their business relations with the Southern whites, the agricultural and other industrial interests of the South, the attendance upon schools, the length of the sessions, the stage which education has reached in that region, the aims and success of the Hampton (Va.) Institute, and the teachers, economists, and philanthropists, who are working for the advancement of that part of the country—he evinced deep enthusiasm and a command of facts that could be the fruit of only long and earnest interest in such themes. Even the casual reader of his letter to the first Trustees will discover evidences of careful study as to the best way to carry out his general aim. Herein is revealed the painstaking sagacity of the successful business man who wants the largest possible return for his investment, and shapes his linesment accordingly. In the first place, instead of causing costly buildings to be erected that he personally may have a material monument to his generosity, he does away with all that waste, and directs that the income of his gift shall go through already existing instrumentalities. To remedy any possible misfortune he provides for restoring the fund should it become impaired, a precaution rarely if ever taken before in enterprises of this sort. He even regards depletion by taxation an evil of sufficient importance to be guarded against. He especially warns the Trustees against spending his money for the advancement, instead of the dissemination, of learning. Lest any one channel should be too narrow or too tortuous best to convey his benefaction to the colored race, he particularly prohibits sectarianism, part sanship, or favor on any ground but the prospect of doing the greatest good to the greatest number, and then, conscious of the mutations which time works in all the machinery of society, education, and government, he specifically provides for a new application of the original fund, if it be deemed best, a generation hence. The scheme in its present shape has been submitted, by the way, to some of the ablest jurists in New England, and, indeed, of the country, and its legal features strongly commended. Mr. Slater herein has had the assistance of such men as the Hon. Jeremiah Halsey, of Connecticut; the Hon. Sidney Bartlett, of Boston; Mr. Morris K. Jesup, of New York, and Chief Justice Waite.

In view of the large discretion left to the Trustees in matters of investment and of distribution, it has been of the utmost importance that the board should be well chosen, and this has been one of Mr. Slater's most anxious cares. Several gentlemen besides those above named have been considered and even approached, but while it has not been practicable to secure their more active and responsible co-operation, their interest and occasional assistance is well-assured. Indeed, as one scans the list above named, he can hardly see how the choice could have been bettered, so long and so publicly identified are most of them with philanthropic enterprise, while the legal and financial interests of the fund are insured, by the selection of two or three men of notable success in those departments of business. Both political parties and all leading Protestant sects are represented. The religious and benevolent proclivities of ex-President Hayes, and his especial interest in the South, are familiar to all who watched his late Administration. Chief-Justice Waite and Mr. Jesup may be trusted to give all the legal counsel which the board can possibly need in their day. The names of William E. Dodge and Phillips Brooks, the one a successful merchant and a Presbyterian, and the other, the eloquent liberal Episcopal preacher of Boston, are synonymous with live, energetic, and broad philanthropy, in the estimation of the whole country. Mr. Stewart's long experience in matters of investment render his judgment and advice concerning the finances of this enterprise of high value. President Gilman, of the John Hopkins University, in Baltimore—a native of Norwich, by the way—and President Boyce, of the University at Louisville, Ky., are both eminent, zealous, and influential workers in the cause of education in its higher and broader aspects, and have earned their titles of Doctors of Laws. The latter, moreover, like the Democratic Governor of Georgia, is a representative of that small class of native whites who are at the same time highly enlightened and earnestly solicitous for the elevation of the long enslaved blacks. Prof. Boyce is a Baptist. Gov. Colquitt belongs to that very prevalent sect in the South, the Methodists, and, being a preacher himself, ministers every Sunday in that capacity to the negroes of his own town. Mr. William A. Slater was placed on the board, no doubt, mainly to represent his father, the founder of the fund. These gentlemen have received the proposition made to them with hearty and intelligent sympathy. Ex-President Hayes, who was in this city last Fall to discuss the matter, was delighted with it, and quick to grasp the great possibilities thus opened. Snatching pencil and paper, he plunged into computations of the number of teachers who could be educated in a given time, and of the number of others whom they in turn could reach with their influence. Mr. Edward Atkinson, of Boston, the distinguished economist, whose conception and execution of the late Cotton Exposition at Atlanta testify to his profound interest in the South, on first hearing of the scheme, in confidence, a few months ago, was moved to tears and then delighted. He entered upon the same sort of calculation as Mr. Hayes. Mr. Atkinson, however, has no share in the management of the John F. Slater fund. Other members of the board, notably Messrs. Dodge and Jesup, of New York, have not only exhibited active interest, but have rendered practical assistance in some of the preliminaries of organization and legislation. The present Speaker of the Assembly at Albany, Mr. Patterson, ex-Lieut-Gov. Alvord and other gentlemen have also been enlisted in the cause.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The Lewiston Journal says: "The toughest lamb story that has come from the region of agriculture this spring, arrives this morning, and is vouched for by a farmer resident of Lewiston. Robert Goddard, of Oak Hill, Monmouth, has a sheep, which gave birth to a black lamb a few days ago. The mother refused to owner dark-complexioned offspring. Every effort was made to induce her to acknowledge the lamb and care for it, dogs were set on it, the lamb was abused, etc., but to no purpose, and the unlucky lamb was sold for 50 cents. Just 48 hours after the first birth, a beautiful white lamb was born to the same mother, and her delight knew no bounds."

Excitement was caused in Perryville, Auburn, on Sunday, by the antics of a man who threw one of his children on a stove and pitched another down stairs.

A. Nelson, the Danish veteran, who was disabled by a gunshot wound in the Danish service, eighteen years ago, and whose leg was operated on with the lance, a few weeks since, died at his residence on Park street, Sunday evening, of secondary hemorrhage. Mr. Nelson was progressing finely till 5 o'clock, Saturday evening, when the hemorrhage began.

For an example of pluck and studiousness, says the Lewiston Journal, allow us to quote Miss Forbes, a young lady in the class of '82, at Bates. Miss Forbes has had a trouble with her eyes, and has been unable to use them for two years; yet she has learned all her lessons thoroughly and preserved a high rank in her class. She has memorized her lessons by having them read to her by her mother or sister, all this time.

The Lewiston Journal says that local butchers advanced the price of best beef by the slide, to $10 per cwt. Monday morning,—the highest since the war.

The Portland Press says: "The Circassian, Captain Smith, of the Allan Line, has arrived from Liverpool via Halifax. She left Liverpool on Wednesday, March 29th, and arrived at Halifax, April 8th. She brought to this port 49 cabin and 581 steerage passengers, bound west. A train of sixteen cars was provided by the Grand Trunk, and the passengers were forwarded at once."

The Argus says: Tuesday afternoon, fire was discovered in the dry room in the Star Match factory, in Portland. The steamers were promptly at the spot and the flames put out, the only loss being some 40 or 50 cases used to put the green wood in to be dried. On the way back from the fire, as horse attached to one of the hose carriage ran away and Chief Cloyes was forced to jump off, regardless of the fact that his broken leg has just begun to grow strong again. Fortunately the jump did not injure the leg severely.

The fair to be given at Hallowell, Friday evening, for the benefit of the Burial Ground Association, promises to be an interesting occasion.

Last year the Star of the East left the Kennebec on her first trip to Boston on April 7th, nearly one week in advance of the date fixed for this year, April 13th.

The transfers of real estate in Kennebec county last week, as recorded at the office of Register of Deeds, amounted to $39,995.

The first consignment of new cotton for the new cotton mill at Calais, arrived Monday, direct from Galveston, Texas. The mill hopes to commence operations the latter part of May.

The new city government of Calais organized Monday, and re-elected all the subordinate city officers with exception of A. S. Hartford, chief engineer of the fire department, vice Wm. B. Taylor, who declined re-election.

The city debt of Calais is $143,000; available resources, $100,000; besides which the city has property valued at $54,000.

York.

The contract for breaking up and removing about 600 cubic yards of sunken ledge on the southwest point of Badger's Island in Portsmouth harbor, to a depth of 10 feet at mean low water, has been awarded to James Andrews, of Biddeford, at $18.

The Times says: Maple sugar is made by tapping maple trees with a gimlet, and grocery store hogsheads with an auger. Which, of course, we must infer to be the York county recipe.

A rumor is current in Biddeford that the Old Orchard Junction railroad, which now runs from the beach to the Eastern railroad, connecting with the latter road about three miles from the station in Biddeford, is to be extended up Saco River, touching at Bar Mills, Salmon Falls, Moderation, Nason's Mills and Limerick.

A SPOILED SENSATION

[From the Cincinnati Commercial, Rep.]

If the committee of investigation into the Chili Peru business was set in motion with the expectation of trapping as big game as "Jim Blaine, of Maine," it is wasting valuable time. Even Shipherd confesses that he never had the slightest suspicion that Mr. Blaine had the slightest connection or interest in the Landreau Cochet, or other scheme of spoils in Peru. Yet, if there were the least room for suspicion, who doubts that Shipherd, with his malevolent disposition toward the late Secretary, would make the most of it?

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION

Recent defalcations ought to attract the attention of trustees and directors to the prominent cause of ninety per cent. of the rascality which brings treasurers, cashiers and other agents to grief and involves financial institutions in heavy losses. Speculation in stocks, upon margins, with money purloined from these institutions is the beginning of nearly all the prominent defalcations of the past twelve months. We hear that one or two banking institutions propose to take measures to see if an ounce of prevention cannot be found which will be worth a pound of cure. They propose to require of their employes an obligation that during their connection with the institution they will not purchase or sell stocks of any description under forfeiture of their situations. The first offence will be followed by a prompt discharge. The pledge is to be carefully worded so as to cover the whole ground.—Boston Journal

INFAMOUS FRAUDS

The Republicans of Albany achieved a signal victory on Tuesday. The Democrats claim the election of Nolan their candidate for Mayor, by a majority of 196 but the affidavits and other proof present a case to show that the Republican candidate Dr Swinburne received the majority of the votes cast and was defrauded of his victory by the villany of Democratic repeaters and inspectors. An indignation meeting was held in Albany Wednesday evening to protest against the crime upon the ballot box. The Albany Journal, in an article in regard to the outrage says: The indignation felt by all classes of citizens at the infamous frauds practiced on the franchise yesterday is intense, no such depth of feeling has come to the surface since the rebels fired on Sumter! But even if Nolan's majority of 196 had been honest the Democracy of Albany would have received a terrible set back. He was elected in 187 when he first ran for Mayor by a plurality of 3 508 he was re-elected two years ago by a majority of 1 603. This time he only claims 196 majority and ever that is said to be fraudulent. There are two theories on which this overwhelming reverse can be accounted for. Nolan may claim that it was due to the growing unpopularity of Democracy in Albany, the Democracy may claim that it was due to the growing unpopularity of Nolan. There is warrant for both theories.

ELECTRICITY

In the electric light which has made some of our streets so brilliant for the last few evenings we see the beginnings of an agency which is to work more and greater changes in our civilization than any other power since the discovery of steam. Electricity has interest for us in two relations—as an illuminating power and as a motive power. In both these directions the progress of invention has been marvelously rapid of late. It seems but a few days since the idea was first conceived, of using electricity for purposes of light. To-day the problem is practically solved, and solved with a rapidity which takes the most sanguine by surprise. Some difficulties still remain in the use of the light for domestic purposes but science is on the track of this solution. For large spaces and wherever great illuminating power is required electricity already has no competitor. The great number of bills which have already been brought into the parliament of England and the Legislative bodies of France for the lighting of the streets of those two great Capitals by electricity, and the numerous movements in these cities for introducing it into private houses is proof that the light has passed out of the hands of the inventors into the hands of the practical working every day world.

The development of electricity as a motive power will be the next great scientific enterprise nor will it be many years before we see its consummation. At the Great Electric Exposition which has lately been held in London, the chief interest has been concentrated on this department, and the most remarkable revelations have been made in this direction. It would not be surprising if in ten or twenty years, we should have a power at work among us, more nimble, more potent, more manageable than even that power of steam which has seemed too wonderful ever to have a rival. The age of steam is ending—the age of electricity is beginning, and it is destined to work a revolution in all the processes of our industrial activity and in our social arrangements which will cast all former revolutions into the shade. There is one particular in which the coming reign of electricity as a motive power has special interest to us. It is destined to be a more democratic power (so to speak) than its predecessor, steam, which, though it has done great things for the people indirectly, yet has very aristocratic tendencies. Only the wealthy can command steam. It makes work depend upon large accumulations of capital. It creates great mills and great millionaires. It draws the mass of workmen around a common centre and perpetuates and even emphasizes the distinction of classes. The work of making shoes, which used to be distributed through the homes of whole cities and even States, is now all done by workmen gathered around the steam engines of a few great manufacturing centres. Steam concentrates work and gathers power into the hands of the few. Electricity is destined to distribute work again, and to play into the hands of the many, rather than of corporations. The transcendent discovery in regard to electricity (that which makes almost certain the result of which I speak) is the fact that it can be accumulated in chests and carried about from place to place and stowed away for the time of necessity. When the workman can purchase for himself at moderate price, just the measure, be it large or small, of this strange power, can take it to his shop, and make it do his work for him, we can easily see how the laborers may be benefited by it,—at the same time, that a great outburst of inventive faculty may be expected among the same class. Imagination fails to grasp what these stores of force are destined to do for the world. If, when, a hundred years ago, Watts had finished his first steam engine, some one had prophesied that what has come to pass in our days, as a consequence of that discovery, he would have been deemed a very wild and visionary man by sober, practical business men. If we should say what we fancy electricity will bring to pass within the next half century, we should seem visionary even to the men of our day who are accustomed to see wonders and to expect them. Science and invention will find their chief work for the next generation in developing the possibilities of this new agency, and putting it into practical applications. Its quickening power will be felt in all the departments of life, but its crowning hour will be the new field of development which it will offer to the hard-handed sons of toil, who will become the free men of industry when the power which capitalists have hitherto monopolized has been brought to their doors for their service.

THE ELECTORAL COUNT

PROVISIONS OF THE BILL REPORTED FAVORABLY

The House Committee on the law respecting the election of President and Vice-President have agreed upon a bill, and directed a favorable report to the House. The bill provides that Electors shall be chosen on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November in every fourth year, except in the cases specified in sections 147 to 149 of the Revised Statutes. That the Electors shall vote on the third Tuesday of December following their appointment, that between the day of choosing the Electors and the day on which they are to vote the title to the office of Elector may be determined, which, if made by the highest judicial tribunal of the State having jurisdiction, shall be conclusive, that Congress shall be in session on the second Wednesday in January next after the meeting of the Electors and count the votes, that upon the reading of certificates the President of the Senate shall call for objections which, if any, shall be made in writing and shall state clearly and concisely without argument, the ground thereof and shall be signed by at least one Senator and one member of the House of Representatives before the same shall be received, that in the event of a controversy in any State as to the appointment or eligibility of Electors the decision thereof by its highest judicial tribunal having jurisdiction shall be conclusive, and the vote shall be counted in accordance therewith unless reversed by both houses, that if there be more than decision the two houses shall determine which shall be received, that where there has been a controversy in any State, and no certified decision has been transmitted, or when two or more such certified decisions have been transmitted, the contested votes from such State shall not be counted unless both houses concur therein. And if there be several Electoral certificates from any State, and no such judicial decision, the certificate held by both houses to be executed by the proper authority shall be conclusive, that if a result is not reached before the fifth calendar day after the first meeting of the two houses no further recess shall be taken by either house, that notwithstanding the decisions and declarations mentioned he title to the office of any person declared to be elected President or Vice-President, and the title of any claimant thereof, may be tried and determined by action in the nature of quo warranto, and the action may be brought prior to the actual entry or usurpation, and must be commenced within ten days after the declaration of the election of the defendant in the Circuit Court of the United States for the district in which the defendants or either of them reside.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

A SURE CURE FOUND AT LAST! NO ONE NEED SUFFER!

A sure Cure for Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. William, an Indian remedy) called Dr. William's Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 or 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, instruments and electuaries do more harm than good. William's Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching, (particularly at night after getting warm in bed,) acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for piles, itching of the private parts, and for nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry of Cleveland, says about Dr. William's Indian Pile Ointment: I have used scores of Pile Cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. William's Indian Ointment.

A CHEMICAL EXAMINATION of the water from the well where the pupils of the Grove street school have been in the habit of drinking shows that it is contaminated with sewerage matter to such a degree as to render it entirely unfit for use. The School Agent is making arrangements to have the school supplied with holly. The holly was examined at the same time and proved to be remarkably free from such contamination.

BODY RECOVERED. Some time last fall a young man, some twenty-eight years old, who was subject to fits, fell from a boat probably in a fit near the steam mill in Hampden and sunk at once. Thursday the body was found in the river in what is called the mink hole, two miles below Winterport near Mt. Waldo. The body or clothing could not be identified, having been so long in the river, but some keys in his pocket, with a tag attached marked C. W. Grant, Hampden, Maine, revealed the fact that he was the one drowned last fall. He was drowned while picking up wood in a punt boat.

Tucker won, with a score of 28 out of a possible 30, and he was awarded a $10 gold-piece medal. The scores of all the members were good.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY gave an exhibition of their lights last night without the globes to show some credulous persons that the light was not affected by a current of wind. This exhibition was a perfect success and increased the power of the light very much. After the use of the lights, which have been so highly appreciated by our citizens who have had an occasion to visit Main street during the opening of the Opera House, we scarcely know what they will do without it. The company intend to put clear glass globes on the light to night to show the effect thereby. The public are not short sighted to fully valuing the magnificent illumination and its intrinsic value to our city.

AMUSEMENTS.

Celebrated Case To Night.

At the Opera House, this evening, the great military drama "A Celebrated Case," will be presented by a good company, organized expressly for the production of this play. The piece is one of the greatest successes known to the stage. Seats are selling well, and a large audience will doubtless be in attendance.

The Banker's Daughter.

The Banker's Daughter Combination, under the auspices of A. M. Palmer, of the Union Square Theatre, N. Y., will appear in the Opera House next Thursday evening in Bronson Howard's romantic play. This combination gave one of the most satisfactory performances of the season last year, and will be pleasantly remembered by many of our citizens. The same beautiful scenic effects will be produced, and the company is kept up to its well known standard of excellence. The sale of seats will open at the box office on Tuesday morning. A crowded house will witness the play on Thursday evening next.

Drawing of Stockholders' Seats at the Opera House.

At an early hour Thursday evening the stockholders of the Opera House assembled in the building to draw seats. The President, Treasurer, Directors and Manager were on the stage. The meeting was called to order and Dr. Coe, in behalf of the company, offered the following resolutions, which were at once adopted

Resolved, That the members of the Bangor Opera House Company desire hereby to express their thanks to the ladies and gentlemen who participated in the play of "Rosedale" for the opening benefit. The dramatic skill they manifested in the presentation of the play deserves high praise, and equally praiseworthy is the public spirit which induced them, unsolicited, to lend their efficient aid to the work of finishing the building completely and opening it brilliantly.

Resolved, That the thanks of the company are also due to the gentlemen who provided the electric light at the Opera House entrance, whereby an additional attraction was given to the opening evenings.

Resolved, That the clerk of the meeting be requested to forward a copy of these resolutions to the amateurs who presented "Rosedale" and to the president of the Electric Light Company.

Manager Owen read the call for the meeting, stating its object and he plan adopted for the accomplishment of the same, and Treasurer Merrill read the list of stockholders and the number of shares held by each. Mr. Joseph F. Snow was then chosen to put the tickets bearing the names and number of shares into the box and shuffle them. Mr. C. H. Bartlett held the box while Mr. Snow drew out the tickets. The names and shares on the tickets were then called out by Gen. Chas. Hamlin, while a record was kept of the order in which the names came out. The first name drawn was Hon. Noah Woods; then followed the others until the stockholders had all drawn.

GRAND EXHIBITION JUVENILE BALL.

A Gay Scene at the Opera House—Magnificent Exhibition by Andrews' Juvenile Class in Dancing—Elegant Tableaux, Brilliant Dancing and Beautiful Costumes—Enthusiasm of the Audience.

The Opera House presented a brilliant scene last evening. It was the occasion of a grand exhibition ball by Andrews' juvenile class in dancing and an audience comprising the elite of the city thronged the house. These annual exhibitions are always deeply interesting and our people look forward to them invariably with the most intense pleasure. In former years these balls have been given in Music Hall, but our magnificent theatre, with its spacious stage and superior appointments, was fortunately selected for the purpose on this occasion. An interest attaches to these exhibitions by the little folks which surpasses in its fascination that attending all other entertainments. It is difficult to imagine an occasion of more supreme enjoyment to the lover of the artistic and beautiful than one of these juvenile balls. In every respect the exhibition of last evening was a brilliant success and surpassed all previous occasions although very meritorious ones have been presented in the past. Andrews' Orchestra played in opening from the opera of Norma. The following programme was then commenced.

The little folks, arrayed in their bright suits and dresses and generally gay costumes, presented a brilliant sight on the stage. When going through the mystic mazes of the dance or participating in some special evolution a kaleidoscopic feature of great beauty was witnessed; and especially magnificent was the scene brought to view during the beautiful tableaux when the bright calcium light was thrown on the stage from the upper gallery. The juveniles performed their several parts most creditably and everything ran along remarkably smooth throughout the entire evening.

The Grand Entree by the class was the opening and the thirty-four couples performed the beautiful movements with remarkable grace and precision. The Bohemian Polka was exceedingly well danced The Lancers, by the primary class, was very pretty. The waltz was graceful and beautiful, as was also the Newport. Owing to the length of the programme the Saratoga Lancers was omitted. Knickerbocker and National Guard quadrilles were superbly danced, and the lively and brilliant Raquet was a fitting close to an exhibition of exceeding merit. Allusion has been made above simply to the class dances and we will now refer to the special dances.

MAY-POLE.

The May-Pole dance was of much interest and was watched with close attention. The beautiful movements of the little folks around the May-pole were very pretty and much admired. The following were the participants:

LES BUTTERFLIES.

Great interest attaches to the Butterfly dance and it is always awaited with deep pleasure. The presentation on this occasion was very good and called forth prolonged plaudits of applause. The following nineteen Misses participated:

James Dunning,	Lulu Garland,
Elliot Jones,	Mary Wheelwright,

Roland Sawyer,	Bessie Davis,

TURKISH MARCH AND SPANISH LINE.

This dance is an entirely new one in our city. It is a dance of much merit and beauty and was splendidly given on this occasion. The eight young Misses had each a tambourine and the Masters each had clappers. During the beautiful and intricate evolutions the Misses and Masters made good music. This dance was a very prominent feature of the evening. The following participated:

Misses.	Masters.
Marcia Kimball,	Dudley Coe,
Nannie Goodenow,	Rockie Coffin,
Belle Daggett,	Gorham Wood,
Nettie Kirkpatrick,	Ralph Hunt,
Josie Wiggin,	Oscar Wasgatt,

HIGHLAND FLING.

This beautiful dance was finely given by two little Misses who entered with zest into the spirit of the dance and were very graceful and pretty in their movements. They were as follows:

Nannie Goodenow, Mildred Varnum.

WIZARD OF THE WAVE.

The last of the special dances was the Wizard of the Wave and it proved very interesting. The dancing by the young Misses and Masters was highly creditable. The following were the participants:

Misses.	Masters.
Julia Dillingham,	Willie Stone,
Martha Robinson,	Fred. Maxfield,
Mamie Andrews.	Walter Hunt.

IN CONCLUSION.

The exhibition was throughout of very great interest and held the closest attention of the large audience. The beautiful dances delighted all present and the applause bestowed was very liberal. Mr. Milton H. Andrews has been untiring in his labors in behalf of his class and the evidences of his careful and thorough training were witnessed at this remarkable juvenile exhibition. The exceptional talents possessed by this popular dancing master are shown very prominently in the great success attained with his class of little ones. The esteem in which Mr. Andrews is held was evinced by the presentation last evening of a large and magnificent floral harp during the exhibition.

THE WILES OF "BANCO" MEN.

The Game Attempted in Boston on a Prominent Gentleman of this City.

The publication of the recent experiences of Mr. Charles Francis Adams with "Banco" men in Boston has brought into special prominence the operations of this class of sharpers. Numerous individuals throughout New England have suffered at the hands of these fellows and among the number has been a prominent gentleman of this city, Hon Samuel H. Blake. The following is the story of Mr. Blake as reported by a Boston Globe correspondent:

"I was in Boston two years ago this very month, and was walking leisurely down Washington street when I was accosted by a young gentleman finely dressed, of great suavity of manner, who called me by name and asked me if I had recently come from Bangor. He introduced himself as a Mr. Shaw, son of Chas. Shaw, Esq., of Dexter, Me., a prominent gentleman, with whom I was personally acquainted. Mr. "Shaw," continuing his conversation, observed that he had just returned from a tour in Europe, and among other valuable curiosities he had brought home a splendidly illustrated encyclopedia, and requested me to step in his room, which was on the second floor in the rear of Sears building, and examine it. Not doubting his story, both as relating to his travels and his parentage, I readily followed him to his room, where another man was sitting at a table engaged in writing on a slip of paper. Shaw immediately asked his companion: 'Have they arrived.' 'Not yet,' was the reply. The man at the table was making figures on pieces of paper, and asked me to guess the number of one of them. I declined, but he pressed the matter, and I guessed the number 40, and he said the numbers was 60. I guessed again the number 30, and he said the number was 50. Shaw was standing close by me during this exercise of guessing, and from that moment I became unconscious and knew nothing more until I was informed by these parties that I had been gambling! I protested I had not, as I knew no games of chance, nor hardly knew one card from another, and had never gambled in my life. They still persisted, however, that I had been gambling, and as evidence produced certain checks drawn on the Merchants' Bank. One check was in the sum of $400, and one other I saw was for $3000. The signature appeared to be in my own hand, the body was in another hand. I seized the $400 check as it lay on the table and tore it in pieces and threw them on the floor. The $3000 check they withheld, and peremptorily refused to give it up, although I made repeated demands for it. Thereupon I left the room and as soon as I recovered from my bewilderment and got control of my senses, I laid the case before the chief of police, who found the man, obtained the check, gave it to me and I destroyed it. Not desiring any public notoriety in the matter, and having, as I supposed, secured my checks, I returned to Bangor and kept silence in the matter."

Here ends the first chapter. Now for the sequel.

About a month ago a person came from Boston to Bangor with a check for $3000 drawn on the Merchants' National Bank, of which Mr. Blake is President, of even date with the former check for the same amount, which the police had obtained and which Mr. Blake had destroyed. This check bore, apparently, the true signature of Samuel H. Blake. The man did not present it to the bank or to Mr. Blake, but attempted to negotiate it with an outside party or parties. In this, however, he failed, and after leaving it with a lawyer for collection he left the city. Had his presence been known by Mr. Blake he would have been placed in the hands of the police without delay. The question arises is it not reasonable to suppose, considering the similarity of methods, that this "Shaw," the would-be son of Charles Shaw, of Dexter, Me., is the identical person who practised the fraud on Mr. Chas. Francis Adams?

Mr. Blake informs a WHIG representative that the above is substantially correct. When he met the alleged Shaw he was on Revere street and was going from the Revere House to the Bank of Commerce in Sears' Building. It was not an Illustrated Encyclopædia, but copies of "Pictorial America" which the fellow expressed a desire to show him. The office in which the remainder of the affair transpired is up one flight in a block on Washington street, not far rods from Sears' Building. His explanation of the recent presentation of the check is that the check which was delivered up by the gamblers and destroyed by him was a forgery while the one having his genuine signature was retained by them, or perhaps they might have had some method of tracing by which a check or other memoranda was duplicated as written, in which case one might be given up and the other retained. Mr. Blake has attempted vigorously to find out who the parties are that they might be given their deserts. It is hardly necessary to state that the individual who spoke so prominently of his connections is no relative of Hon. Charles Shaw, of Dexter. A report was started some time ago that the fellow who thus adopted the name of Shaw was really named Miller and was killed in a gambling den in New York last fall. It is generally believed, however, that the individual is still living and it is thought he may be already under arrest for connection with the recent affair with Mr. Adams. Before long Mr. Blake will visit Boston and will then interview those already arrested and see whether he recognizes them as the persons implicated in the attempt upon him.

Services on Fast Day.

FIRST PARISH.

The First Church, on Broadway, was well filled. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. H. L. Griffin, who announced the hymns, Rev. F. T. Hazlewood, who read the ninth chapter of Judges and led in the closing prayer, and Rev. H. L. Howard, who offered the prayer before the sermon. The congregation united in singing—

1 "O, God, beneath Thy guiding hand
Our exiled fathers crossed the sea"

2. "Oh, where are kings and empires now,
Of old, that went and came."

3. "God bless our native land."

The discourse by Professor Hopes was from Judges 9: 14, 15. His theme—"Civil Service Reform." It was not his purpose to criticise any party or person, but to present the infelicities, abuses and injustice of the ordinary method of appointment to office.

The duties of such as held office were set forth as not being political, but executive, subordinate, clerical, carrying out the rules of the department. These were to be filled by men of faithfulness and efficiency, fitted for the special work assigned them, and who should have no other aim than to fulfil the trust committed to them by the nation, to whom they were responsible.

SECOND BAPTIST.

A service was held in the Second Baptist church in the evening, conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. B. Ilsley. His discourse was from the question of Cain, in Gen. 4:9—"Am I my brother's keeper?" A question which none but a guilty soul would ask. The duties we owe one to another were clearly presented and the obligations of each to seek to promote the good and happiness of others and so advancing the welfare of the community. Reference was made among other points to the duty of carrying out this law of love in reference to the temperance cause, and to all efforts to promote the temporal and spiritual interests of men.

Services were also held at the Universalist and Episcopal churches.

THE HERO OF THE REGIMENT

BY REBECCA R. PIERCE

His freedom's cause he bore a part,
When swift and sudden mid the land,
Foul Treason aimed, with murderous hand,
A dagger at the nation's heart

Yet he was no portion of it sacred
Yet home and kindred left he all,
Responsive to his Country's call
To help her in the hour of need

A soldier true, in field or tent,
Shrinking his share of praise to claim
He well deserved his gallant name—
The hero of the regiment "

No craven's fear of death he knew,
In the dare battle for the right,
He was the bravest 'mid the fight,
With loyal heart to freedom true

At "Hilton" shot and shell
He rode his charger at the front,
And bore the heavy battle's brunt
While thick and fast his comrades fell

With heart that with true valor burned
He cheered the faltering columns on,
When courage failed and hope was gone
Until the tide of battle turned

He sought the comrades in distress,
And by the dying soldier's bed,
He smoothed the pillow for his head,
With all of woman's tenderness

When Fence, sweet dove, flew over the land
And hushed the deadly cannon's roar
He sought the quiet home once more
Let not unscathed by War's red hand

A nobler strain no hand may weave
Of those whose days were nobly spent—
The hero of the regiment
Who wears to-day, an empty sleeve

THE WIDOW'S SURPRISE

A California mining town away up amid the snow clad rock bound peaks of the Sierra Nevada mountains

The town was irregularly laid out and was scattered along a rock which emptied into the Consumnes river several miles below Both dwellings and business houses—or more properly speaking caves—were constructed of unhewn logs the crevices between the timbers being chinked and plastered with mud The town contained at least a dozen saloons or saloons and gambling houses combined, and in these halls much of the hard earned money of the miner parted company with him, to take up its temporary abode in the saloon till or the pocket of the professional gambler The dwellings of the town were scattered along the creek or built on the side of the mountain the majority of them being rough bachelor dens, for women were scarce in the newly discovered diggings

In a small cabin on the upper end of the town sat a woman a widow's weeds, hold ing upon her knee a bright eyed sunny haired girl about five years old, while at the cheek of a baby lay upon a bear skin before the open fireplace It was Christmas Eve, and the woman sat gazing abstractedly into the fire She was yet young and as the glowing flames lit up her sad face they invested it with weird beauty

Mary Stewart was the widow of Alick Stewart and but two years before had lived comfortably and happily in a camp on the American river Alick was a brawny miner but the premature explosion of a blast in an underground tunnel had bedotted his life in an instant leaving his family without a protector, and in straitened circumstances His daily wages had been their sole support and now that he was gone what could they do?

With her little family Mrs Stewart had emigrated to the camp in which we find them (all western mining towns are called camps) and there she earned a precarious livelihood by washing clothes for the miners. He was a third lot, but the brave little woman toiled on, cheered by the thought that her daily labor stood between her darling little ones and the gaunt wolf of starvation The clothes were patched and tabby, and their food plain, and sometimes scant, yet they were never in absolute suffering

Jack Dawson a strong honest miner was passing the cabin this Christmas Eve when the voice of the little girl within attracted his attention Jack possessed an inordinate love for children and although his manly spirit would shun the sneaking practice of invisdropping he could not resist the temptation to steal up to the window for a moment to listen to the sweet prattling voice The first words he caught were

"Before papa died we always had Christmas like this, mamma"

"Yes Totty darling but papa earned money enough to afford to make his little girls happy at least once a year You must remember Totty, that we are very poor and although mamma works very very hard she can scarcely earn enough to supply us with food and shelter"

Little bright faced Benny raised his curly head from its soft rest in the warm breast and chirpily said

"Does want till I die to be a man mamma and to work to have to work I do like to be a miner like papa was an dig every so much money, but I won't do that so that fellas blasting things an dirt fell down and killed poor papa did"

Jack Dawson still lingered upon the outside He could not leave although he felt a flam of himself for listening)

"Why bless my little man, what a brave little fellow he is I do hope and pray daily, that you will grow up a strong and a good man and one who will be a blessing and a comfort to mamma when she gets old

"But, pray, tell me, Santa Claus, dear Christmas, didn't we mamma?" questioned the little girl

"Yes Totty, but we were poor then, and Santa Claus never notices real poor people He gave you a little candy then, just because you were such good children"

"Is we any poorer now mamma?

"Oh yes much poorer, He would never see us at all now

Jack Dawson detected a tremor of sadness in the widow's voice as she uttered these last words, and he was suspicious of dampness from his eyes

"Where is our old stockings mamma? I'm going to hang mine up, anyhow, maybe he will come like he did before just because we try to be good children said Totty

It will be of no use darling I am sure he will not come and tears gathered in the mother's eyes as he thought of her empty purse

"I don't care—I'm going to try anyhow Please get one of my stockings, mamma, please! The little girl

"Your clean stockings are on the line outside and I cannot go out and hunt for them this bitter cold night You may hang up your old ones, but oh darling, I fear you will be so terribly disappointed in the morning Please let it go till next Christmas and then we may be richer"

"No, mamma, I am going to try anyhow"

Jack Dawson's great generous heart swelled until it seemed breaking from his bosom He heard the patter of little bare feet on the cabin floor as Totty ran about hunting hers and Benny's stockings, and when she had hung them up heard her voice again as she wondered over and over if Santa Claus really would forget them He heard the mother tell her treasures to get ready for bed, heard them lisp their childish prayers, the little girl concluding

And, oh, Lord, please tell good Santa Claus that we are very poor but that we love him as much as rich children do, for dear Jesus sake. Amen!"

After they were in bed, through a small rent in the plain white curtain, he saw the widow sitting before the fire, her face buried in her hands and weeping bitterly. Dashing a peg, just over the fireplace, hung two little patched and faded stockings, and then he could stand it no longer He softly moved away from the window to the rear of the cabin, where some objects fluttering to the wind met his eyes Among these he searched until he found a little blue stocking which he removed from the line, folded tenderly, and placed in his overcoat pocket and then set out for the main street of the camp.

He entered Harry Hawk's gambling hall, the largest in the place, where a host of miners and gamblers were at play. Jack was well known in the camp, and when he got upon a chair and called for attention, the hum of voices and the chinking of ivory suddenly ceased. Then in an earnest voice, he told what he had seen and heard, repeating every word of the conversation between the mother and her children. In conclusion he said.

"Boys, I think I know you, every one of you, and I know what kind of mettle yer made of I've an idea that Santa Claus knows just where that cabin is situated, and I've an idea he'll find it afore mornin' Hyar's one o' the little gal's stockin's the I hooked off'n the line when I heard the widder say she'd hung 'em with the wash in' The daddy o' them little 'uns was a good hard wo'kin' miner, an' he crossed the range in the line o' duty, jist as any critter is liable to do in our dangerous business Hyar goes a twenty-dollar piece right down into the toe, an' hear I lay the stockin on this card table—now chip in much or little, as ye kin afford "

"Hold them checks of mine on the ace Jack," said Brecky Clark, a gambler, and leaving the faro table, he picked the blue stocking up carefully, looked at it tenderly and when he laid it down, another twenty had gone into it, to keep company with the one placed there by Dawson.

Another and another came up, until the foot of the stocking was well filled, and then came the cry from the gambling tables

"Pass her around, Jack."

At the word he lifted it from the table and started around the hall Before he had circulated at half a dozen tables it showed signs of bursting beneath the weight of gold and silver coin, and a strong coin bag, such as is used for sending treasure by express, was procured, and the stocking placed inside of it. The round of the large hall was made, and in the meantime the story had spread all over camp From various saloons came messengers saying

"Send the stockin' round the camp, the boys are a waitin' for it"

With a party at his heels Jack went from saloon to saloon. Games ceased, and tipplers left the bars as they entered each place, and miners, gamblers, speculators, everybody crowded up to tender their Christmas gift to the miner's widow and orphans Any one who has lived in the far western camps and is acquainted with the generosity of western men, will feel no surprise or doubt my truthfulness when I say that after the round had been made the little blue stocking and heavy canvas bag contained over eight thousand dollars in gold and silver coin.

Horses were procured and a party despatched to a large town down on the Consumnes from which they returned next day break with toys, clothing, provisions, etc, in almost endless variety. Arranging their gifts in proper shape and securely tying the mouth of the bag of coin, the party noiselessly repaired to the widow's humble cabin The bag was first laid on the step, and the other articles piled up in a heap over it On the top was laid the lid of a large pasteboard box on which was written with a piece of charcoal

"Santy Claus doesn't always Give poor folkes The shake a this camp

Christmas morning dawned bright and beautiful The night had been a stinging cold one, and when the rising sun peeped over the chain of mountains to the east, and shot its beams to the western range, the sparkling frost flashed from the snow clad peaks as though their towering heads were sprinkled with pure diamonds.

Mrs Stewart arose, and a shade of pain crossed her handsome face, as the empty little stockings caught the maternal eye She cast a hurried glance towards the bed where her darlings lay sleeping, and whispered

"Oh, God! how dreadful is poverty."

She built a glowing fire, and set about preparing the frugal breakfast When it was almost ready she approached the bed, kissed the little ones until they were wide awake, and lifted them to the floor With eager haste Totty ran to the stockings, only to turn away, sobbing, as though her heart would break Tears blinded the mother, and clasping her little girl to her heart, she said in a choking voice —

"Never mind, my darling, next Christmas I am sure mamma will be richer, and then Santa Claus will bring us lots of nice things"

"Oh! Mamma!"

The exclamation came from little Benny, who had opened the door and was standing gazing in amazement upon the wealth of gifts there displayed.

Mrs. Stewart sprang to his side and looked in speechless astonishment She read the card, and then, causing her little ones to kneel down with her in the open deep way, she poured out her soul in a torrent of praise and thanksgiving to God

Jack Dawson's burly form moved from behind a tree a short distance away, and sneaked off up the gulch, great crystal tears chasing each other down his face

The family are down from their knees and began to move the stores into the cabin There were several sacks of flour hams, canned fruits, pounds and pounds of coffee tea and sugar, new dress goods, and a handsome woman woolen shawl for the widow, shoes, stockings, hats, mittens and clothing for the children, a great big wax doll that could cry and move its eyes, for Totty, and a beautiful red sled for Benny All were carried aside, amid alternate laughs and tears

"Bring in the sack of salt, Totty and that is all said the mother is not God good to us?"

"I can't lift it mamma, its froze to the step

The mother stooped and took hold of it and lifted harder and harder, until she raised it from the step Her cheek blanched as she noticed its great weight, and she carried it in and laid it on the breakfast table With trembling fingers she loosed the string and emptied the contents upon the table Gold and silver—more than she had ever thought of in her wildest dreams of comfort and almost buried in the pile of treasure lay Totty's little blue stocking

We will not intrude longer upon such happiness, but leave the joyful family sounding praise to Heaven—and Santa Claus

The whole story soon reached Mrs Stewart's ears. She knew Jack Dawson by sight and when she next meet him, although the honest fellow tried hard to push by her she caught hold of his coat and compelled him to stop and listen to her tearful thanks The tears shed were not all hers, for when Jack moved away there were drops of crystal hanging on his ruddy cheeks

Four months from that "Merry Christmas Mrs Stewart became Mrs Jack Dawson, and every evening, when the hardy miner returns from his daily labor to his comfortable and happy home Totty and Benny will climb upon his strong knees, and almost smother him with kisses, while they lovingly address him as "Our Santa Claus papa."

HORTICULTURAL ITEMS

Make your home beautiful—living to it flowers,
Plant them around you to bind and to bloom,
Let them give light to your loneliest hours—
Let them bring light to enliven your gloom,
If you can do so, O make it an Eden
Of beauty and gladness almost divine,
Twill teach you to long for that home you are heading,
The earth robed in beauty beyond this dark clime

Those who cultivate a house and garden plants may now commence preparations for securing a supply of plants for the summer garden Many who have saved over some varieties of bedding plants from last season may very readily propagate a few in the house, especially of those kinds which can be increased easily. But there are some plants which it will not pay the amateur to attempt to propagate in the house on account of their slow growth and the difficulty of rooting the cuttings. Tea roses are among the most difficult kinds to propagate successfully, and can be purchased of large growers more cheaply than they can be raised. But cuttings of many of the varieties of soft wooded bedding plants can be easily rooted by placing the young growth or "tips" in any kind of light soil or sand care being taken to keep it constantly wet. Happily for the amateur, the kinds which can be most easily rooted in this way are the most popular bedding plants. Geraniums, coleus, verbenas, heliotropes, lantanas and achyranthes are all very easily rooted, and none are superior to these for making a display of flowers and foliage in "massed" beds or ribbon-line gardening.

For making a gorgeous and constant display of bloom, combined with an everfresh and attractive foliage, nothing exceeds the zonale geranium, and of all the varieties of this popular plant which we now have, none is more popular than the old and tried Gen. Grant Many of the newer varieties have larger and finer blossoms and handsomer foliage; but that which makes the Gen. Grant the most popular variety of its class for massing and ribbon-line planting is the fact that it combines a very brilliant blossom, a flower truss of enormous size, very profusely borne, and foliage of brilliant green, contrasting finely with the rich scarlet of the flower At a sale of plants last season in New York plants of Gen. Grant brought ten cents each, while plants of the same size of the fancy move this would no bring more than half that amount

Verbenas if propagated now for planting in the flower bed, should be kept pinched, as the shoots continue to elongate, to induce a stocky growth. A long, slim stemmed verbena plant is a very poor one for outdoor planting Verbenas should also be kept as cool as possible and will exposed to the sunlight This produces a tougher stem and thicker leaf, which enables the plant better to withstand the change on being planted out in open ground Heliotropes and lantanas require a good brisk temperature and plenty of water while the young plants are growing. These are the main requirements Never allow a heliotrope or lantana to become checked or stunted in its growth, as it takes a long while to recover from the effect. After cutting of geraniums, verbenas etc, are well rooted, they should be potted off singly in pots not larger than 2 or 3 inches These will usually accommodate the young plants until planting out time But at all times the plants should be kept in a healthy growing condition, and to aid in this the pots should be plunged in damp sawdust or moss, to prevent the plants from drying out

No bedding plant roots more easily from cuttings or grows more rapidly than the coleus, and for this reason it can be conveniently raised in the house The great diversity in leaf color and marking found in the new varieties of coleus introduced from year to year is truly wonderful, but I think the charm has been reached and many of the newest sorts are not really superior to some of the older kinds For ribbon line planting three or four of the old varieties are used in large quantity. Coleus have not been extensively used in gardens decorations more than a dozen years, but of all the different varieties introduced since coleus have been grown none is so popular to day as the old verschaffelti. Probably ten plants of this kind are planted to one of any other, and in all large gardens and floral designs this variety predominates

AGRICULTURAL ITEMS

With London sewage as a fertilizer certain varieties of beets have been raised weighing upwards of sixty pounds each

An analysis of a sample of apple pomace from a press of more than ordinary power, and hence unusually dry was made at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station with a result showing the pomace to carry food elements superior to corn fodder and to turnips mangels, and all of our root crops except the potato, and showing but little inferiority to the last-named tuber The new system of ensilage should render the production of apple pomace a matter of ease and certainty.

In speaking of his experience with feeding ensilage to dairy stock, J W Walcott of Readville Mass, states: "As to the quality of the cream I can say that by feeding fifty pounds of ensilaged maize and one quart of cotton seed meal the increase over the amount when feeding English hay and six quarts of corn meal averaged twenty-five per cent in milk, and ten per cent in butter from the milk, which is a total gain in butter of 37½ per cent The butter brings the highest market price in Boston
